DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (If known) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The building is a grey stone structure of cruciform plan with transept roofs lower than the nave roof. Between the north and east arms is a porch with a pointed arched doorway and bracketed canopy. The nave end has three pointed-arch windows; the east transept has square headed windows on the lower floor and in the gable. On the west end is a semicircular apse with an unusual stone roof.

A concrete block addition on the north is connected to the church by a covered passageway.

The stonework is of a very high quality. Detailing is drawn from several sources, including the Richardsonian tradition and the arts and crafts school.
